Human Rights and Social Justice (United Kingdom)

Human Rights and Social Justice (United Kingdom):

Human rights and social justice are fundamental concepts that underpin the legal framework and societal values in the United Kingdom. These concepts are closely intertwined, with human rights serving as the foundation for social justice in ensuring that all individuals are treated fairly and equitably in society.

Human rights refer to the basic rights and freedoms that every individual is entitled to, regardless of their nationality, gender, race, religion, or any other characteristic. These rights are enshrined in international treaties such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the European Convention on Human Rights, as well as domestic legislation like the Human Rights Act 1998 in the UK.

Social justice, on the other hand, pertains to the fair distribution of resources, opportunities, and privileges within society. It aims to address inequalities, discrimination, and marginalization to ensure that all individuals have access to the same rights and opportunities. Social justice encompasses various aspects of life, including education, healthcare, employment, housing, and criminal justice.
